

A BETTER OUTLOOK.

According to the Assessors' reports in the various counties the total valuation of property in the State in 1889 foots up about $30,000,000. This estimate is exclusive of the value of mines on the Comstock, as represented in the quoted prices of the shares issued by the mining companies whose property is located on the lode, which if added, increases the total to about $36,000,000.

The total gold and silver yield of the lode and the current year will reach about $5,150,000 and that of the State about $8,000,000.

The estimate is nearly $1,000,000 below the gold and silver yield of the State in 1888. The shrinkage is principally in the output of the Comstock mines, which was curtailed on account of a lack of ore crushing facilities, the stage of water in the Carson river being too low from June until November to furnish power for operating the stamp mills along the course of that stream, and not to an exhaustion of the ore resources of the lode.

The early and copious snow and rainfall of the present winter, coupled with the renewed activity in Tuscarora, Robinson and Pioche districts, justifies that the gold and silver yield of Nevada in 1890 will exceed $10,000,000 and that of the Comstock $6,000,000.

Bartine at Washington.

The Washington correspondent of the Reno Journal has the following about Nevada's Congressman:

Congressman Bartine has been here since the 20th inst. He took an active and for a new member, a very prominent part in the Speakership contest. While entertaining a very high opinion of Mr. Reed's abilities and the value of his services as a party leader, he felt that the interests of his constituents required the election of a Speaker more in accord with our Western ideas, particularly upon the silver question. His support, therefore, was given to Mr. Cannon, of Illinois, but he stood ready to vote for any one of the four Western candidates whose election seemed possible. So much prominence was given to the silver question in the preliminary skirmish, that he deemed it inadvisable to attend the St. Louis Convention, believing that he could do more good here.

It was quite noticeable that all of the candidates were especially anxious to procure Nevada's Representatives support, because of the fact that he more peculiarly and distinctly, than any member of the House, represents a silver producing State. The Western man made a gallant, though disorganized fight, Reed winning in a caucus by only one vote.

Mr. Bartine since here has made a very favorable impression upon all who have met him, and many of the older members speak of him in high praise. He is regarded as a man of high ability, and it is predicted that his career will be in the highest degree creditable to himself and advantageous to the State.

Rough Deal.

It is told of a young lad who is a pupil in the Truckee schools, says the Republican, that a few days ago the principal remarked that the next day he would give the lad mentioned a good thrashing. Fully expecting such chastisement, the boy went to work and padded himself; stuffed his breeches full of hay, and under his coat, and around his legs; anywhere that a limber switch would be likely to strike. Thus prepared he went to school with a broad grin. But his face lengthened as the day passed and the subject of whipping was not referred to. It failed to come and he was "all broke up." He now hates that teacher worse than he did before.

A bill has been introduced in Congress granting to the State of Nevada all of the arid lands within her boarder and limiting the ownership of said lands to 80 acres.
